

voltage level;

an inverter for converting a direct current output of the converter into an alternating current form at a particular frequency;

a speed detecting means for detecting the speed of the magnetic generator; and a target voltage setting means for determining the target voltage level to be low when the detected speed is low and to be high when the detected speed is high so that the target voltage level shows a positive characteristic to the detected speed.